Earthquake in Vanuatu

Amalgamated Telecom Holdings Limited (ATH) extends its deepest sympathies and condolences to the families who have lost loved ones following the earthquake that struck Vanuatu yesterday. Our thoughts are also with those who have been injured, and we wish them a swift and full recovery.

We are relieved to report that all staff of ATH's subsidiary, Vodafone Vanuatu, are safe and accounted for.

As of 8:00 p.m. last night, Vodafone Vanuatu successfully restored basic internet messaging, and limited international call services across the country. While efforts to restore full services are progressing, the timeline remains dependent on the restoration of power supply and the undersea cable coming back online. Vodafone Vanuatu was able to maintain domestic call services throughout this unprecedented disaster, ensuring families were able to keep in touch with each other.

ATH and Vodafone Vanuatu have been able to swiftly respond by leveraging the resources and expertise of the Vodafone Pacific Emergency Response Team, ensuring the prompt and coordinated restoration of critical telecommunications services. Additionally, ATH and Vodafone Vanuatu are actively coordinating with other service providers to accelerate the recovery process. Teams from ATH's other Pacific markets are on standby and ready to provide additional support as needed.

Early this morning, Vanuatu was hit by another earthquake. Whilst the damage assessment is underway, we remain committed to supporting the people of Vanuatu during this challenging time and will continue to work tirelessly with all stakeholders to ensure essential telecommunications services are maintained and full connectivity is restored to affected communities as soon as possible.

ATH Group stands in solidarity with the people of Vanuatu as the nation navigates this challenging period and begins its path to recovery.
